Autumn 2013

JSIS C 145 Introduction to Judaism Noam Pianko

MW 1:30-3:20pm
Credits: 5 I&S (required for Jewish Studies major & minor)
This class explores the question: what is Judaism? However, the course will not provide a single definitive answer—such as a specific belief, set of ritual practices, or shared texts and myths. Judaism, this course argues, can only be understood as a dynamic religious tradition that has developed many forms during a more than 3000 year history that has spanned nearly the entire globe. Particular attention will be paid to innovations introduced during the last two hundred years in Europe and the United States.

JSIS C 489 Language and Ethnicity in Israel Today David Bunis

TTH 3:30-4:50pm
Credits: 5 I&S
The fabric of contemporary Israeli society is woven of diverse ethnic and religious groups. With the help of guided readings, visual images, and sound recordings, the course introduces these groups, with a particular emphasis on their variegated languages, cultural traditions, and ethnic and religious identities. David Bunis is a world-famous expert on Ladino and Jewish languages at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He will be spending the 2013-2014 academic year at the UW as a Schusterman Visiting Professor of Israel Studies.

JSIS C 175/GERMAN 195/C LIT 397 Popular Film and the Holocaust Richard Block
MWF 12:30-1:20pm
Film screenings, Mondays at 2:30 until end of film. (Many films can be viewed by students on their own).
Credits: 5 VLPA
The horror of the Holocaust challenges the very limits of the imagination; the desperation of what the victims experienced is outside the realm of human speech. Thus arises the absolute necessity, the moral imperative to represent what by definition cannot be represented. In this course we will examine the strategies various filmmakers have developed to respond to this imperative. Films to be screened include: Sho-den of the Finzi Contini.

JSIS C 489 Special Topics: Sephardim on Jerusalem David Bunis
TTH 1:30-2:50pm
Credits: 5 I&S
Jerusalem has always stood at the center of Jewish consciousness. Depictions of the city, its inhabitants and their lifestyle are to be found in sacred sources such as the Bible, Talmud and Jewish liturgy, and also in medieval and modern poetry and song, exegetical, kabbalistic and responsa works, historical and travel literature, the periodical press, and fictional works such as the novel and drama, in Hebrew, in other Jewish languages, and in the major languages of the world. The present course focuses on Jerusalem as portrayed in writings by Sephardic authors of the former Ottoman regions and its successor states, from the sixteenth century through the modern era.

TTH 1:30-3:20pm
Credits: 5 I&S (required for Jewish Studies major & minor)
Explore various expressions of Jewish culture including biblical, Hellenistic, Judeo-Arabic, Sephardic, Ashkenazic, Eastern European, American and Israeli. As we analyze Jewish culture across time and space, we will discuss how Jews both adopted the cultural assumptions of their neighbors and adapted these traditions to preserve a distinct identity.

JSIS C 336A/HSTAA 336A Digital American Jewish History Noam Pianko
TTH 11:30am-1:20pm
Credits: 5 I&S
This course provides an introduction to American Jewish History through archival research, digital storytelling and public history. In this course, students will have the opportunity to explore digitized archival material related to Jewish History in the Pacific Northwest, interpret these documents in light of broader historical trends, and create on-line, public exhibits. Learn Jewish history while gaining crucial skills for communicating with new media and technology. No prerequisites or technical skills required.

JSIS C 489A/SPAN 394 A History of the Ladino Language and its Literature David Bunis
TTH 3:30-4:50pm
3 Credits I&S / VLPA
Ladino is the traditional language of the Sephardic Jews of the Balkans and Middle East. The course surveys the historical stages in the development of Ladino, from its roots in Middle Iberia to its use on the internet as the international language of a virtual speech community. The lectures are presented against a backdrop of the history and traditional lifestyle of the speakers.

JSIS C 377/SOC 377 American Jewish Community Paul Burstein
MW 12:30-2:20pm
Credits: 5 I&S
Tens of millions of Americans are immigrants and the children of immigrants. This course focuses on the way of life Jews brought with them to America; their hopes for religious freedom and economic opportunity; how their developing views of race, ethnicity, and cultural pluralism helped other immigrant groups—including those arriving today—find their place in American society. The course concludes with an analysis of the opportunities and challenges faced by Jewish young adults as they try to define the American Jewish community of the 21st century.
